Abstract: Four cases of aphthous stomatitis treated with Kampo medicines were studied. Three cases were treated with Ninjinyoeito (TJ-108), Hochuekkito (TJ-41) and/or Tokishakuyakusan (TJ-23) because of deficiency of ki (vital energy) and/or ketsu (blood circulatory function) deficiency. Another one case was treated with Byakkokaninjinto (TJ-34) because of the existence of interior hot state with oral candidiasis. In three cases, Kikyoto (TJ-138) was used for gargle drug. Two or three months later, all cases were completely treated with Kampo medicines. There was no recurrence after the medication.

Key words: aphthous stomatitis, Ninjinyoeito, Hochuekkito, Tokishakuyakusan, Byakkokaninjinto, Kikyoto
